Tibby Tuckett brings her enthusiasm and passion to the Perth NRM Sustainable Agriculture team, where she is dedicated to supporting farmers and rural communities build knowledge, confidence, and resilience in today's challenging climate.
Before joining Perth NRM at the end of 2022, Tibby travelled the world and gained invaluable skills from a range of jobs and experiences. Her background includes studying Zoology at UWA and growing up on a sheep and mixed-crop farm in the Great Southern.
Tibby was involved in the Natural Capital Accounting project and works closely with the RegenWA team to facilitate numerous events and projects within the Swan Region and South-West of WA.
She sees NCA and other methodologies as a great tool for landholders looking to measure, monitor, and track their natural environment's condition over time. Tibby believes this type of pro-active work could strengthen the ground-up approach we need to meet the top-down pressures from Government and market demands.
